World Future Council

BUILDING OUR SHARED FUTURE

Climate change, the destruction of the environment and the global financial crisis are clear signs that today’s humanity is living and consuming at the expense of future generations. A fundamental change of course is essential. The World Future Council pursues the implementation of long-term policies that promote sustainable living in order to secure the right of future generations to inhabit a healthy world with just societies.

WHO WE ARE

The World Future Council consists of 50 respected personalities from all five continents. They come from governments, parliaments, the arts, civil society, science and business. Together they form a global voice, speaking up for the needs and rights of people and planet. The World Future Council head office is in Hamburg, Germany, with additional staff working from London, Johannesburg, Geneva and Basel.

HOW WE WORK

With the help of its unique global network the World Future Council challenges short-term thinking in order to improve national policies and global governance. Only thus can we create just, peaceful and sustainable societies that work together to pass on a healthy planet. In close collaboration with civil society, policy-makers and business we research equitable and ‘future just’ policies and legislation worldwide. We advise policy-makers and support them in the concrete implementation of such policies.

SPREADING GOOD POLICIES

We highlight exemplary policy solutions with our annual Future Policy Award, which is the only award that celebrates policies rather than people on an international level. Our first Future Policy Award celebrated the Food Security Programme of the Brazilian city Belo Horizonte, which cost only 2% of the city’s annual budget. The result: child mortality was reduced by 60% and malnutrition by 75%.

HOW YOU CAN HELP

The World Future Council relies on your support for its global work towards securing our shared future. Help us to protect the rights of future generations! You can assist the work of the World Future Council in general or support a specific programme that you feel passionate about.
